A FEW WORDS FOR OUR

BOOTS AND SHOES!

We cannot see the consistency in the logic of some dealers in BOOTS AND SHOES. We have a thorough Shoeman, who we have personally known for over 40 years—continually in the New York, Boston and Philadelphia Markets, buying for us, at the VERY BOTTOM PRICES FOR CASH; consequently we can do offer better goods for the money than any other house in California.

We have good reasons to believe that those who do upon their superior advantages for comparing SHOES of different manufacturers are rather ignorant, as we know of one instance where a trunk full of Chinese made SAMPLE SHOES were taken to New York and Philadelphia, to compare with first-class Eastern manufactured goods, and the men of one factory in particular said: "We have not the time to compare, but will give you the entire use of our office."

True, our room for SHOES is small, but we are turning out the best values. Judge for yourselves, and do not be led astray by appearances.

COUNTRY ORDERS receive careful attention, and filled promptly.

DEATH.

One of death's "thousand doors to let out life" opened last night for a maiden just on the threshold of a young womanhood full of rosy promises, and she passed beyond the portal through which there is no return. Melanie Parsons, the only child of George F. Parsons, chief of the editorial staff of this journal, is dead after a long and painful illness. When life with all its richest possibilities was just opening to her the doors of its treasure-house, the sleep that no pain shall wake wrapped her in its chilly robes. Her sufferings were long and great, but she bore them with the same gentle bravery that marked the amiability of her pure spirit in health, and pointed with such promise to a happy and useful future had the usual lease of life been hers. Charished with all the fondness of a devoted and unspiring affection; the center and chief hope of a parental love that knew no weariness, her death falls upon our associate and his wife with a heaviness that is prostrating, and makes all the world dark to them. In this supreme hour of his grief, words but ill convey a sense of the deep sympathy which the associates of Mr. Parsons upon this paper feel for him and his.

THE GREAT LONDON FIRE.

The late fire in London destroyed property to the amount of $15,000,000. This, therefore, was undoubtedly the most costly fire since that of the Tooley Street Wharf, which occurred in 1860 or 1861, and which destroyed $25,000,000 worth of property. This Tooley Street fire, however, was much fiercer and less manageable than the last one, for the flames got into an extensive cellar filled with Russian tallow, Stockholm tar, and other very inflammable substance, and as the firemen could not get at it, it actually burned under ground for three weeks. The then chief of the London Fire Department was killed at that fire by a falling wall, and it was the cause of a decided increase in the force of the department. The last fire, however, has shown that the force is yet nearly strong enough to cope with an extensive conflagration, and that in fact it ought to be at least doubled. And as they are tolerably practical people when property is most endangered by London fires in the city, it is probable that the needed reforms will be made without too much delay and red tape.

The Arizona Star says: "The Mexican trade in Tucson averages $40,000,000 annually." It adds: "New buildings are going up in all directions, and Tucson is rapidly improving."
